Interactive comment on “Soil fertility along toposequences of the East India Plateau and implications for productivity and sustainability” by Peter S. Cornish et al.

Ashok Kumar
ashok.purulia@gmail.com

Received and published: 9 February 2020

This paper very well explains about the variability among the land class and within land class. It is important to know for the farmers and extension workers who need this information for nutrient application in field. Most of the time the recommendations are crop specific and not the land class specific. So this paper puts emphasis on to consider the nutrient status variability in the land class while suggesting nutrient application for a particular crop.